From the Director of Church Relations

It is exciting when a young man walks into your office and indicates that he is interested in following a college curriculum that will lead to a career as a church youth director. That happened last week. Fortunately, Wartburg has developed a program precisely for persons like him. It is a religion major with a youth ministry concentration. We have similar programs for persons who are interested in roles as director of parish education, director of camping ministry, urban ministry and Christian day school teacher. Our emphasis on church vocations is an example of what makes Wartburg College a distinctive college of the church.

Wartburg's ties to the church will remain essentially the same with the emergence of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America. In our present arrangement, the delegates to the national convention of the American Lutheran Church recess briefly from their usual business and constitute themselves as the corporation of Wartburg College. As such, they elect members to the Board of Regents and make any changes that might be required in the college's constitution and by-laws. It is a short meeting, but it does keep the linkage close between church and college. In the ELCA, this same basic approach will be retained.

In the ALC, basically all of the church financial support to colleges has come from the national body (which gets its funds from the local congregations, of course). In the Lutheran Church in America, church funding for the colleges has come from the regional synods. In the new ELCA, the two approaches will be combined, so that part of the church support for colleges will come from the national level and some from the synods.

Twelve Midwestern colleges that are located in Regions 3 and 5 of the ELCA (the states of Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Illinois, North and South Dakota) have chosen to band together for the purpose of synodical funding. The synods situated in these states will put their college support money into a common treasury, and it will be dispensed to the 12 colleges according to an agreed-upon formula.

Our official connection with the church body is important. Also of great importance are the many connecting links with congregations, students who are members of the churches, faculty and staff who involve themselves in the life of the church at all levels and the common dependence we share on a loving God.

Whitehouse gift of $1 million is largest ever

A $1 million gift, the largest in its 135-year history, has been received by Wartburg from the estate of the late Alvin and Clara Whitehouse of Gillespie, Ill.

Gifts from the Whitehouse estate, designated for the college's endowment, now total more than $1.6 million.

In 1983, the Whitehouse Business Center was named and dedicated in recognition of the provisions that had been made for the college by the Whitehouse family. The building houses the business administration, business education, accounting and economics programs of the college.

The Whitehouses first become acquainted with the college through a church-wide funding campaign, the Lutheran In-gathering for Education (LIFE) during the mid-1960s.

Prior to his death in 1973, Whitehouse began making provisions for a major gift to the college. According to Wartburg

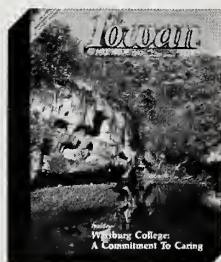

President Robert Vogel, his wishes were fulfilled by his wife, who shared his desire to make a substantial gift to the college. Clara Whitehouse died in 1986.

"Harold Becker (former director of church relations) and Merritt Bomhoff (former director of development and special assistant to the president for deferred giving) worked closely with both Alvin and Clara," Vogel said. "Through Bomhoff, I became acquainted with Clara. It is exciting to consider the blessing their gift to Wartburg's endowment will be to each new generation of Wartburg students."

Whitehouse was an attorney in Gillespie following his graduation from Washington University in St. Louis.

The Iowan features Wartburg

Wartburg was the featured college in the Fall 1987 issue of The Iowan magazine, a quarterly publication that focuses on the people and institutions of the Hawkeye state.

Written by Louise Roalson, a freelance writer from Cedar Rapids, Iowa, the article is entitled "Wartburg's Commitment to Caring" and focuses on the college's emphasis on service and concern for others, both here and abroad. Attention also is paid to the college's tradition of academic excellence.

It is richly illustrated with numerous color photographs of the campus, its students and faculty.

Reprints of the article are available by sending $1 to Wartburg's College Relations Office. Copies of The Iowan magazine are available for $3.75 plus $1 for postage and handling through the Wartburg College Bookstore.

VICE PRESIDENTIAL VISIT—Vice President George Bush, on the campaign trail for the Republican nomination for president, visited Wartburg Nov. 7. He attended an invitational luncheon with representatives of the agricultural community and spoke at an open forum in the Student Memorial Union prior to tossing the coin for the kick-off of the Wartburg-Upper Iowa football game. His visit was preceded by days of work concerning security, logistics and communication.

College launches new leadership program

A new emphasis on the development of leadership in students has been implemented at Wartburg.

It is a program that will make a strong use of role models, fostering relationships for students with significant persons on campus and throughout the Midwest who can serve as mentors.

The program is intended to challenge all students at the college.

"It is our hope that leadership development will permeate every facet of our life together," President Robert Vogel said.

In its program, Wartburg has adapted four themes suggested by Warren Bennis of the University of Southern California, an authority on leadership, as contributing factors in the development of leaders: self esteem and personal worth, a clear sense of vision, perspectives gained from cross-cultural experiences and mentor relationships.

"We will keep reminding students of their personal gifts and potential, encouraging them to dream big dreams," Vogel said. "We will help students develop a broad view of things and an understanding of how it all fits together, challenging them to consider that the needs of others and the common good are important goals. We will expand the opportunities for students to view life and the world through the eyes of people from different backgrounds and with different viewpoints.

Achievement of those goals is under the guidance of an on-campus coordinating committee that includes Dr. Melvin Kramer of the business administration and economics department, Dr. Cheryl Budlong of the education department, Beth Triplett, coordinator of leadership training, Vogel, Dr. Edwin Welch, provost of the college, and Linda Kettner, assistant vice president for advancement.

The leadership emphasis was developed with the assistance of a blue chip advisory committee.

One of its members, Mary Grefe, president of Lead Associates in Des Moines, Iowa, and a former Wartburg Board of Regents member, told the group at a planning session that, while there is a leadership crisis in this country, there also is an ethics crisis and the two go hand in hand.

"Are we in danger of losing a sense of standards, of what's right, what's lasting and what is necessary to maintain a humane community and the personal satisfaction that must be part of it?"

She made a plea that leaders be principled, value-shapers, and defined a "good" leader as one who "elevates others' best interests above one's personal gratifications, is open and honest in dealing with others and conscientiously completes all work in a timely manner."

She said a new model of leadership can be developed in colleges by identifying role models, providing ample opportunities to practice leadership and providing education in the humanities.

"What the colleges need to provide is a moral compass," she said, "a compass that points in the same direction regardless of false gods of material success and shallow fame. Colleges must find a new definition of excellence."

The program started this fall with leadership workshops under the supervision of Triplett. Led primarily by members of the Student Life staff with assistance from faculty members, the workshops assist students in identifying their own leadership qualities.

The Winter Term workshops will include such topics as identifying personal strengths and weaknesses, human relations and the motivation of others, public speaking and presenting, conflict and facilitating change, assertiveness, ethics, long-range planning, futuristics and trends, risk taking and group dynamics and team development.

A feature of the emphasis is the mentoring program, which will involve some 30 to 50 students during their sophomore years.

Individuals who assisted the college in developing its plan include Grefe, Cooper Evans, former U.S. Congressman from Iowa; James Gannon, editor of the Des Moines Register; Dean Kleckner, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation; Karen Merrick, mayor of Guttenberg, Iowa; Dan Kaercher, editor of the magazine, Midwest Living; John Chezik '57, a Kansas City, Mo., business leader; James Aipperspach, vice president and chief executive officer of Northwestern Bell in Des Moines; John Taylor, chair and chief executive officer of The Principal Financial Group, Des Moines; Ross Christensen, a Waterloo, Iowa, dentist and member of the college's Board of Regents; Evelyn Rathe, mayor of Waverly; Harry Slife, former president of the Black Hawk Broadcasting Co. in Waterloo and a Wartburg Board of Regents member; and Irving Burling, chief executive officer of Century Companies of America in Waverly and chair of the Board of Regents.

Enrollment dips slightly

Full-time student enrollment at Wartburg shows a slight decrease this fall, according to the Registrar's Office.

Some 1,210 full-time students have matriculated, compared to 1,215 in 1986.

There is a greater decline in part-time students, largely because of two off-campus programs in Forest City and Charles City that are not being offered this year. Part-time students number 87 this fall as compared with 114 last year.

This gives the college a total headcount of 1,297 students. Last year's total enrollment was 1,329. The total includes 378 new students this fall. Full-time equivalency is 1,249.

The Fall Term to Fall Term retention rate was 80.9 percent, the third consecutive year it has been better than 80 percent.

There are students from 21 countries and the United States. Some 15 foreign countries were represented last year.

"This is a reflection of the college's emphasis on international education," President Robert Vogel said. "The international student enrollment is even more remarkable considering that more than a dozen students who had applied and were accepted by the college were denied visas for study abroad. The college is continuing to work with these students in an effort to get their government's approval for study abroad beginning with the Winter Term."

Staff changes bring new faces, new titles

A number of staff changes for the 1987-88 academic year have been announced at Wartburg.

Two of the changes expand responsibilities for individuals already on staff, while the remainder are new people.

Sarah Pringle-Lewis and Edward M. Knupp have a change in title and responsibilities. Pringle-Lewis, who was assistant provost, is now assistant provost/dean of students to reflect the fact that she is the central contact for Wartburg students. Knupp, who had been residence hall director at Clinton Hall, a residence unit, was appointed acting director of residential life.

New people include two librarians, two admissions counselors, an assistant director of admissions, a graphics designer, a director of the Learning Resource Center and a minority student adviser.

The librarians are Susan Morris '77, who is the catalog librarian, and Sandra Eppler Cary '63, public service librarian.

Changes in the admissions department are Blake Harms '85, who is assistant director of admissions, and Tom Walgren and Lynn Ross, counselors.

Renae Schroeder '87 is the graphic designer; Mary Schneider has been named director of the Learning Resource Center; and Charissa Gainous is the minority student adviser.

Morris

Cary

Pringle-Lewis will now supervise the Learning Resource Center, Career Development Center, Counseling Assessment Center, Residential Life and international and minority students. She also chairs the Student Life Committee.

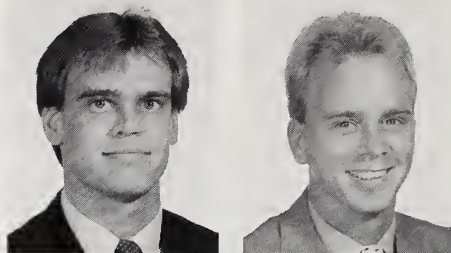

This is in addition to responsibilities held previously—student orientation, advising, counseling, the student judicial system, academic actions and student government.

She came to Wartburg in the summer of 1986 from Tiffin University in Ohio, where she was dean of students. She previously had held positions at Hiram College in Ohio, Monmouth College in Illinois, Western Illinois University and Pepperdine-Seaver College in California.

Knupp, who also coaches soccer and assists in basketball and baseball, first joined the Wartburg staff in 1985 after earning a B.S. degree in distributed studies at Iowa State University. He takes over for Robin Krahn '83, who moved to Augustana College in Rock Island, Ill.

He is responsible for the college's residence halls, supervising three residence hall directors and 35 student residence hall assistants, and assists Pringle-Lewis with the student judicial system.

Morris replaces Joan Loslo '59, who moved to the University of Northern Iowa as serials librarian, and Cary takes over for Janice Kragness, who entered the University of Minnesota for additional graduate work.

Morris formerly was in the Great River Library System in Quincy, Ill.

Cary has been a librarian at the Wichita, Kan., Collegiate School. She previously was in a family computer software business in Wichita for several years.

Harms, who also works as a counselor in Illinois and Southern Wisconsin, most recently was manager for Spurgeon's Department Stores in Dixon, Ill.

Walgren, a graduate of the University of Iowa, was an admissions counselor at Marycrest College in Davenport, Iowa, and Ross, who graduated from Cornell College in Mt. Vernon, Iowa, last spring, had previous experience in the admissions office at her alma mater. Walgren has recruiting responsibility in Eastern Iowa and Ross in Western Iowa and Nebraska.

Schroeder, who is responsible for the design and layout of all official college publications, excluding student-produced publications, served as a graphics assistant with College Relations from September 1986 to May of this year, when she graduated.

Schneider, replacing Mary Bleckwehl '77, who returned to the East Coast, was a Chapter I reading teacher in the Denver, Iowa, Community Schools last year. She also taught in California and North Carolina. She is a graduate of Hamline University in St. Paul, Minn., and has taken additional course work in reading and learning disabilities.

Gainous, who replaces Don Wright, comes to Wartburg from the Texas Department of Human Services in Houston. She is completing a master of arts degree in agency counseling at the University of Northern Iowa. She previously was a program assistant in the Ethnic Minorities Cultural and Educational Center at UNI.

Wartburg initiates African studies program

When Wartburg opened its doors for classes this fall, five students began a new venture in Africa.

The five were the first students to be approved by the Lutheran church in Tanzania to participate in the college's latest offering, "Venture Education," an African study program that blends a liberal arts curriculum with work in a rural setting similar to that carried out by such groups as the Peace Corps.

The students were Michelle Baxter of DeWitt, Iowa; Michelle Wikner of Cedar Falls, Iowa; Russell Leeper of Waterloo, Iowa; Kimberly Collier of Fort Madison, Iowa; and Jan Sonnenberg of Fridley, Minn.

Baxter and Wikner were assigned to the Lutheran Junior Seminary in Morogoro, where they taught science and supervised laboratory experiments. Both did a senior research project on tropical biology, one of them on the baobab tree, a.k.a. "the Devil's tree."

Collier also was at the Lutheran Junior Seminary, but she worked in the library and with the music program.

Leeper went to the Lutheran parish of Arusha Chini near Moshi, Tanzania, where he focused on youth work on a sugar plantation. He also did a comparative study on youth ministries.

Sonnenberg had a variety of assignments at the Ruhija Music School near Bukoba, which is on the west shore of Lake Victoria. She served as a tutor, did research on the dynamics of culture shock and assisted in the gathering of traditional music from the Haya tribe. Her school has a well-known museum of traditional musical instruments.

In preparation for their trip to Africa, the students took a beginning course in the Swahili language last May. Upon returning to campus, they will be encouraged to share their experiences with other students and in their home communities.

This is the first year Wartburg has offered "Venture Education," which was developed by Dr. Herman Diers of the religion faculty and the Rev. Herbert Hafermann '59, who was at the college last year on leave from Tanzania, where he is a missionary, teacher and school administrator.

According to Diers, this is the first learning-service program of its type offered for credit among Iowa colleges.

The students are earning the equivalent of a full term of academic credit.

$5,000 goes to new religion programs

A $5,000 grant from the Siebert Lutheran Foundation, Inc., of Wauwatosa, Wis., has been received by Wartburg to assist in launching new church vocation programs within its religion major.

The funds will be used to promote the programs among congregations, both to employees already in church professions and to young people interested in a church vocation. This will include two one-day conferences on campus as well as printed materials.

The four new concentrations within the college's religion major are Youth Ministry, Parish Education, Camping Ministry and Urban Ministry.

The Youth Ministry concentration provides training for persons who oversee programming in churches for junior and senior high youth.

A Director of Parish Education has responsibility for a complete program of Christian education. This involves supervision of the Sunday School, adult classes and vacation church school, cooperation with pastors in the confirmation program and development of Christian growth opportunities for the congregation.

The Camping Ministry concentration is designed to train persons to be directors of church camps, and the Urban Ministry concentration develops skills to work in population centers with diverse ethnic groups.

Schneider writes Thoreau book

Dr. Richard Schneider, chair of Wartburg's English department, has had his book, Henry David Thoreau, published as a part of the Twayne United States Authors Series by Twayne Publishers in Boston.

A review of the book in the Thoreau Society Review said, "For many years, we have been waiting for a Thoreau volume in Twayne's United States Authors Series, and now at last it is here. It has been worth waiting for."

The book is a brief introduction to the author's life, works and criticism of his works. It is designed for the lay reader.

Schneider

The review added, "It is the best introductory volume to Thoreau now available. It is straightforward, well-balanced, level-headed and clear. It is good in emphasizing Thoreau's strong points and objective in not overlooking his weak points. A worthwhile addition to our shelves."

Schneider, who joined the Wartburg faculty in 1986, is considered an authority on Thoreau. He has authored numerous articles on the American writer for professional journals and three years ago was moderator and organizer of the Thoreau Society's session on "Cape Cod" at the Modern Language Association convention in Washington, D.C.

He is a graduate of Hamline University in St. Paul, Minn., and holds M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from the University of California at Santa Barbara.

GREENWOOD

A Grand Home Fit For a President

By Carolyn Eggers

Sitting among majestic maples, oaks and elms on an acreage overlooking the college from the north, the Victorian home built by Daniel A. Long in 1871 is a grand home fit for a president.

During the past year, Wartburg College has restored and renovated the home as the official residence for the college's president. In late September when the leaves were a blaze of fall color, President Robert and Sally Vogel moved into the 116-year-old historic home.

The home dates back to the early years of Waverly and Bremer County history. When the first white settlers came to Bremer County in 1845, the land was an unbroken, gently rolling prairie, about one-sixth of it covered with timber. At that time the county was part of the Winnebago Indian Reservation, but several years later the 300 Winnebago Indians would relocate in Crow River, Minn.

Attracted by the fine stands of timber, the productive land and the Cedar River, which was often called "the gem of Iowa waters," the first settlers came to the site that would become Waverly in the early 1850s, usually building log cabins. In 1853, Bremer County designated Waverly as its county seat.

It was during this time that Long, who was born in Kentucky in 1825, brought his family to settle in Iowa, living at various times in Bremer and nearby Buchanan counties.

Meanwhile, Waverly was growing and was incorporated in 1859. Two years later, the Civil War broke out. Patriotism in the county ran high, and by the time the war ended in 1865, 500 Bremer County residents had enlisted in the war effort.

After the war, Long purchased land in Waverly, but it wasn't until 1869 that he and his wife, Margaret, and six children moved to the Waverly property where he would live for the rest of his life.

Two years later, Long built the stately, red-brick home that later would serve as home to Wartburg's president. By this time, his wife had given birth to their seventh and last child, and the family undoubtedly needed the extra space in the new home.

This was a time of horse-drawn carriages in the streets and privies in the back yard. Long was a respected farmer and real estate dealer. Historical sources describe him as "an expert judge of land values" and "a man unusually thrifty in business matters," who accumulated about a thousand acres of land.

A civic-minded person, Long later served on the Waverly City Council for 10 years, representing Ward 5. In 1879, a year before Long was first elected to the council, the Wartburg Normal College opened in Waverly. The following year, Wartburg's first building, Old Main, was dedicated.

Long built his Waverly home on a 300-acre property he called Greenwood Farm. At that time, the southern tip of the property was within the north city limits, but the home was just north of the city.

A. T. Andreas' Illustrated Historical Atlas of the State of Iowa, published only four years after Long built the home, includes engraved views of only two Waverly residences. Long's home was one of these, indicating the prominence of the home at that time. The home shown in the engraving is surrounded by a huge fenced yard dotted with trees. Long's farm was known for its many choice fruit trees. A driveway going straight from 12th Street to the home's west entry porch is also shown.

The engraving reveals a cupola on the roof with two windows on each side. From this high vantage point, Long could survey the work of farm hands out in his fields. Long was 88 when he died in 1913, 10 days before the dedication of Wartburg Hall.

Securing a new home for the president became necessary after the Wartburg Board of Regents decided last fall to build a new residence hall south of the president's campus home and to incorporate the home as a student lounge and study area.

In January, the college was able to purchase the historic two-story Long home on 7½ acres from Ralph and Lavon Juhl. Purchase of the property and an addition on the home were made possible through the generosity of an anonymous donor. The Juhls, who lived there 28 years, also provided a gift to assist in the project. Based on its historical name, the college is calling the home Greenwood.

Major renovation and restoration work on the home were made possible through a gift from Board of Regents member Lorna Karsten Wissink '50 of Mesa, Ariz. Wissink was attracted to the project because of her longtime interest in old things, both buildings and antiques.

When Wissink was owner and board chairman of Andrew Savings Bank, she restored a century-old limestone building in La Motte, Iowa, for use as a branch bank. She also provided a generous gift for the restoration of Wartburg's Old Main in 1986. She bubbles with enthusiasm about the restoration of the president's home. "The house just looks fabulous," Wissink said during a recent visit.

Major goals in the Greenwood project were to create a distinctive residence that restores much of the historical character of the home and to provide ample space for college entertaining. The project includes an addition for a dining room, bathroom, family room, and double garage on the main floor, and a laundry room and master bathroom upstairs.

The Vogels were deeply involved in the plans for Greenwood, and Mrs. Vogel spent countless hours planning the interior design and restoration and scouting the area for historical pieces to adorn the home.

The Victorian era produced a number of distinct styles. Greenwood was built in the bracketed Italianate style, which was inspired by Italian architecture. As was typical of the Italianate style, the home features high ceilings, tall and narrow round-arched windows with elaborated crowns, widely overhanging eaves with decorative brackets beneath, a square house form with a low pyramidal roof and a cupola.

Sometime in the past, the original cupola was removed, and the architects in charge of the restoration designed a new one to restore the home's historical appearance. Another cupola sits on the new attached, double garage.

The home historically had porches on the north and south sides of the back wing. Because of the addition on the north side, that porch was torn down, and the south porch was restored to the original design with its elaborate Italianate ornament.

Also in keeping with the historical character of the home, the college restored the west entrance as the formal entry. In the late 1950s, the Juhls removed the west entry porch, which was dilapidated, and walled in the doors on the inside, using the south door as the main entrance. The college refurbished the south entry porch during the recent renovation. This entrance has an elegant, elliptical fanlight above the door and narrow sidelight windows.

The west entrance features the original, arched doorway and paneled, double doors with brass lanterns on either side. St. Paul's Lutheran Church in Waverly no longer needed these old lanterns after remodeling some years ago, and an area brass shop refinished them for the home. The college built a circle drive from 12th Street to the restored main entrance, removed the former drive and added a service drive for the out-buildings.

Guests enter through these west doors into the receiving room, where they see themselves reflected in a floor-to-ceiling ornate, gilded mirror that measures 10 feet high by 6 feet wide. The mirror graced the Wartburg Hall lounge before that building was razed to make room for construction of the Whitehouse Business Center. The mirror is one of many special touches in the home reminiscent of Wartburg's past.

The Longs likely used this room as the traditional Victorian parlor. A wide doorway separates the receiving room from the foyer and its south entrance.

The wood in elaborate door frames, wide baseboards and window casings lends a deep richness to these rooms. Most of the woodwork is walnut, and all of it was refinished during the restoration. The original pine floor, which was carpeted in recent years, was refinished to a satin gloss and covered with Oriental rugs, which were popular during the Victorian era. The doors in the original main section of the home open with the white porcelain knobs Long used when he built the home.

Because the walls are 16 inches thick, the window casings framing the round-arched windows are especially deep. The windows, many of which have the original glass, are dressed in a floral swag drapery that covers part of the window frame but none of the glass.

The white-painted walls and Oriental rugs in the receiving room and foyer create a light and airy feeling in rich contrast to the walnut woodwork. The wall next to the ceiling is decorated with a pelmet, a border of white embossed paper made of cotton fibers, which is combined with white crown molding above and a picture rail below. Such embossed papers were widely used by the Victorians in borders and under chair railings.

Resembling a fluted, white plaster bowl, the matching light fixtures hang from brass chains and reflect light from the bowl to the ceiling and out into the room. Mrs. Vogel discovered these old fixtures in an area antique shop and restored them.

Until recently, mystery surrounded the walnut staircase in the foyer. Townspeople generally have believed that when Long built the home, the location and length of the staircase were different from now, but no one seemed to know for sure. When the Juhls bought the home in 1958, they found evidence of this in the discovery of some two dozen staircase spindles and a 4-foot section of stair railing stored upstairs.

The south entrance in the foyer features a fanlight above the door and sidelight windows.

Lorna Karsten Wissink '50 of Mesa, Ariz., watches Sally Vogel attach an etched-crystal shade to the antique brass light fixture in the dining room. Wissink donated the funds for restoring and renovating the historic home.

Another sign that the staircase has been relocated is that the pine floor in the foyer has markings suggesting that the staircase newel post originally sat about 5 feet inside and to the west of the foyer door. When the Juhls bought the home, a curved wall at the stair landing, later straightened, hinted at a previous winding staircase.

Daisy Vander Werf, 87, of Aplington, Iowa, recently shed light on the staircase puzzle. She grew up in Waverly about a mile north of the Long home, and her family sold eggs to the Longs. As a little girl, she recalls climbing the great winding staircase all the way to the cupola. It was here in this cupola hideaway that she and her sister loved to play with their paper dolls when they visited. The staircase was probably relocated when the cupola was removed sometime later.

The bedroom in the northwest corner of the main floor, just off the receiving room, was converted into a cloak room and a powder room. The marble sink in the powder room comes from the college's Neumann House, now the home of the student newspaper, the Wartburg Trumpet.

President Vogel's great grandfather, Otto Kraushaar, built Neumann House on the east side of the campus after Parkinson's disease forced him to give up his position as director at Wartburg's Clinton campus in 1907.

The kitchen occupies the northeast portion of the home's original main section. Over the years, the area served as a bedroom and later a family room until the Juhls converted it into a kitchen in 1975. During the recent renovation, the kitchen was entirely remodeled, and a small pantry was added off its northwest corner.

Four matching light fixtures from Old Main hang in the kitchen, pantry and nearby hall to the family room.

The kitchen features white-painted oak cupboards, white marble-like Corian countertop, wallpaper in a strawberry pattern and blue glazed-ceramic tile flooring. A diagonal island with bar stools provides the kitchen eating space. An aspect of the kitchen Mrs. Vogel especially enjoys is a desk area that can be entirely hidden from view with a bifold door.

The home's original back wing was converted into a spacious living room. In the beginning, the Longs may have used this area as a kitchen, pantry and hall to the back stairway in the northeast corner. The back stairs were removed during the renovation, and the deteriorating east wall was replaced.

Although decorating books of the 1870s viewed the hearth as a significant element in Victorian design, Long built no fireplaces in his home. In contrast to the forced air heating system used now, the Long home was apparently heated by stoves in various rooms. Today, the living room's major focal point is the new formal fireplace and leaded-glass windows that take up most of the east wall.

The fireplace opening is enclosed with glass doors framed by dark-green marble salvaged from the former front entry of Wartburg Hall, and the hearth uses the same marble. Underneath the elaborately carved mantel are shelves flanking either side of the fireplace. These are painted white, as are the baseboards, window casings, crown molding and walls. The carpeting is gray frieze.

Light streams in from three tall, round-arched windows on the south wall, the middle one formerly a door to the porch, and from leaded-glass windows above either side of the fireplace mantel. Mrs. Vogel designed and selected the glass for these windows, which measure 29 inches high by 20 inches wide. Dr. Phillip Kildahl of Waverly made the windows and assisted with the design. He is a Wartburg professor emeritus of English, who has been practicing the art of stained and leaded glass for more than 40 years.

Incorporating a flower-petal motif, the leaded-glass windows sparkle with five types of glass. From the center, they are cut crystal, glue chip, cracked ice, antique and beveled plate glass. Mrs. Vogel selected unstained glass so the windows would not interfere with color schemes of future residents.

A doorway on the living room's north wall leads to the formal dining room, part of the new addition. The room features a bay window in the east wall and a built-in buffet with a marble-topped serving area. Two walnut and glass display cabinets from the former museum in Old Main's attic store fine china and crystal.

The fireplace with its dark-green marble from Wartburg Hall and the leaded-glass windows make a striking focal point in the living room. The brass candlesticks on the mantel were used for chapel services some years ago in the Little Theatre. At left, the walnut staircase graces the foyer.

A deep gray-blue wallpaper in a tulip pattern decorates the walls above the chair railing, and the walls are painted white below the railing. The Vogels found an antique, brass light fixture with etched-crystal shades to hang above the dining room table.

The new construction also includes a family room with space for a dining table and a bathroom with a marble sink. Future plans call for a patio off the family room's east entrance.

The exterior red brick of the historic home is incorporated in the downstairs and upstairs halls of the addition, which are connected by a circular oak staircase. All the doors in the original back wing and in the addition open with brass knobs from Wartburg Hall.

An open sitting room at the top of the walnut staircase, a laundry room, a guest bathroom, three bedrooms and a master bathroom complete the upstairs. Originally, what's now the master bedroom in the back wing may have been the maid's quarters reached by the back stairs, but more recently, this unheated space was used for storage. The room's cove ceiling is decorated with a wallpaper border. The doors turn with new, pointed, steeple hinges to match the original Victorian steeple hinges in the rest of the home.

When the college began the restoration and renovation project, no one knew what secrets the historic home held. What was uncovered in the southwest bedroom was a delightful surprise. Uncovering some history is one of the things that makes restoring old homes so much fun.

In removing two lowered ceilings, workers uncovered parts of pointed Gothic plaster arches with plaster medallions decorating the wall above each of the four windows and the door. They also found a plaster medallion in the center of the original 12-foot ceiling, and this was restored. A blue and white china and crystal chandelier now hangs from the medallion's center. Such splendor in design indicates this was probably the Longs' master bedroom.

Last spring, a Wartburg art student, Ramlan Abdullah from Malaysia, made casts of the remaining plaster pieces in order to fashion new arches and medallions like the originals. Removing the arches revealed that the original wall color was blue, and the walls in the restored room match that blue.

To complete the restoration of this bedroom, the pine floor was refinished, and the woodwork and doors were painted white. The Vogels have furnished the room with two blue and rose Oriental rugs and an antique, white-iron bed with brass knobs and trim.

For the Vogels, planning for the restoration and construction and then moving into the historic home have made this an exciting year. "The college has provided a distinctive residence for its president that will be a landmark in the Waverly community for years to come," President Vogel said.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

The valiant struggle to emerge

I feel deep inside of me that this is one of the most important times in Wartburg's history. Wartburg has the opportunity to emerge as one of the outstanding colleges in the Midwest.

This summer I did a lot of reflecting on "the times" of the college. Throughout Wartburg's history there have been those "times" of special opportunity for the college truly to emerge. But each time, for one reason or another, the opportunity could not be fully realized.

The college's historian suggests that in the early 1900s, in Clinton, the college had leadership with a vision for the school that could well have made it a premier institution in the Midwest. The hindrance to the college at that "time" was a church constituency tied to the classic German "gymnasium" system, which prevented adaptation to the educational needs of a young and growing country. Instead of emerging, there was only a slow, sometimes begrudging growth for the college.

By the late 1920s, at Clinton, changes had been made in the curriculum and once again there was a "time" for the college to surge forward as a full-blown liberal arts institution. This time it was the Great Depression that severely curtailed the college's opportunity. Wartburg was caught in the church's efforts to preserve what it could by closing some schools and merging others. Wartburg was merged first in Clinton and then moved back to Waverly in 1935. It was not until 1945 that the church finally stopped raising the question of where the college should be permanently located.

Then came the Becker era, a period of great growth. First came accreditation. Then veterans of World War II came to college in great numbers through the GI Bill. Enrollments went up dramatically. The college, in fact, could not keep up with the buildings it needed to serve increasing numbers of students. This "time" it was the fiscal policy of the church, forged during the Great Depression, which prevented the college from borrowing any money and hindered the college in fully achieving the gains that were possible.

I have studied the college's five-year plan for 1962-67. It was an ambitious plan, and the college reached most of its goals. By 1967, the college had 1,300 students—on the way to a goal of 1,500. It was another "time" of special opportunity. Again Wartburg made significant advances, especially in the academic area. It was during those years that the college developed the Wartburg Plan, its general education program. The 4-4-1 calendar was adopted with the May Term. Internships, practicums and experiential learning opportunities were expanded, providing opportunities for hands-on learning by students.

Also in the late 1960s and into the 1970s, the fiscal base of the college was being expanded as the college made new friends and generated increased support.

But once again, at the time of special opportunity, one factor held the college back from surging forward. This time it was enrollment. Enrollment declined from a high of 1,450 in 1968-69 to 1,080 in 1981.

Now, in 1987, by the grace of God the college again stands at one of those critical moments in its history.

We have spent more than a year and a half setting goals for the future. Many alumni and friends of the college have been involved in those discussions. In the next decade Wartburg will emerge as one of the outstanding colleges in the Midwest. The college will gain the recognition it deserves and earn the reputation it needs to excel.

The college will emerge by doing what Wartburg does best—challenging and helping students to put it all together. Students come to Wartburg with uncertainties about themselves and their futures. Wartburg is a place where they can put it all together—their faith, their learning, their perception of themselves and the world, and a sense of calling and purpose. Wartburg is a place that helps spark a fire, a passion, in the hearts of students and challenges them to lead and to serve.

What is distinctive about a Wartburg education? It is really a combination of things, a dynamic interaction. On the one hand, the college has vigorous academic expectations of students. On the other hand, there is tremendous support to help them succeed. Wartburg is committed to the liberal arts, the broad view. The college also provides excellent training for careers, expecting its graduates to be useful. The college has a tradition of service—people who care about people. And now the college has launched a new emphasis on leadership development—helping students realize their worth and potential. Wartburg is an open place that encourages exploration and discovery. Yet it is a place with a firm foundation of faith and values. Finally, Wartburg has a Midwest location but reaches out to the world. These dynamic interactions provide student opportunities that are distinctive to Wartburg College.

If the college is to take a giant step forward in the decade ahead, all of the important elements must be evident—growth in student endowment, aggressive fundraising, new and renovated facilities, new equipment and able staff. We have the foundation on which to build. The challenge is to make the most of "this time."

Your help and support is critical to Wartburg College in fulfilling its mission as a college of the church. We trust that God, who has blessed our school throughout its long history, will continue to guide and direct its course and provide the resources that the college needs to faithfully serve each new generation of students.

ALUMNI

Average alumni gifts to the college during the 1986-87 fiscal year rose to $136, up from $118 the year before. Twenty-five percent of the college's 12,000 alumni contributed during the year, up from 24.5 percent in 1985-86. A $200,000 challenge has been put in place for the 1987-88 year by a group of alumni leaders. This challenge encourages the new and increased giving of other alumni. All Aboard!

All Aboard Alumni Challengers

A $200,000 All Aboard Alumni Challenge provided an incentive for new and increased gifts to the college during 1986-87 and will continue to set the pace in 1987-88. The challengers listed below have pledged a minimum of $5,000 during this two-year period. Their challenge is for fellow alumni to match this $200,000 commitment with new and increased gifts to the college.

HERITAGE CLUB

The Wartburg Heritage Club continues to have a positive growth pattern. Twenty-seven members in the past year brings total membership to 478. Our goal of 500 members by the end of 1987 is within reach.

Heritage Club has been a key factor in helping Wartburg's endowment more than triple in the last ten years. At this point endowment of the college has exceeded a level of $3.95 million.

To qualify for membership in the Heritage Club, simply inform the college that provision has been made for a future gift to Wartburg. Such gifts may be in the form of a will, trust, annuity, insurance policy, or establishment of a restricted endowment.

The tenth annual meeting of the Heritage Club was held on May 22, 1987, with 112 members in attendance.

SPORTS

Fall sports review

Although Wartburg did not win any fall sports championships in the Iowa Conference, the Knights finished in the first division in all sports but one.

The volleyball team had its best season since the sport was established here by posting a 24-11 record and tying for second in the Iowa Conference with defending champion Central; the women's golf team placed third in the IIAC; the men's cross country team and the women's tennis team each finished fourth and the football team over achieved its way into a tie for fourth.

A young women's cross country team placed fifth for the only second division finish. An injury-riddled soccer team, which does not compete in the IIAC since the league does not sponsor the sport, had a disappointing 3-11 season.

Coach Janet Vaughan's volleyball team was in the thick of the hunt until suffering its second loss to eventual champion Simpson Oct. 20. Until that match, the Knights had won 12 in a row, en route to posting a 13-3 IIAC mark.

The Knights practically rewrote the record book, setting five individual marks and four team highs. DeAnn Helgeland of Bricelyn, Minn., and Kris Kuper of Osage, Iowa, both strong hitters, earned the individual records. Helgeland had the most kills in a season, 238, most attack attempts, 753, and the most digs, 1,681. Kuper improved the season attack percentage to .355 and upped her own record for most solo blocks with 59.

Kuper won first team All IIAC honors for her play, and Beth Warner of Whitehall, Wis., who also was named to the All Tournament team at the Rockford Tournament, was put on the second team.

Coach Buzz Levick had a young women's golf team, numbering five freshmen and one sophomore in his starting line-up at the IIAC tournament.

That group shot a 702 to place third behind perennial champion Central and Loras and two strokes better than Luther.

Stephanie Reinert of Durant, Iowa, was Wartburg's medalist, shooting a 162 to finish fourth among all individuals and win an All IIAC medal.

The most fiercely competitive sport this fall was men's cross country. All three teams finishing ahead of the Knights in the IIAC meet were nationally ranked, Luther, Loras and Simpson.

Kori Stroffregen of Jesup, Iowa, paced the male harriers by placing sixth in the IIAC meet and winning All Conference honors. A week later, he came back to place 17th in the strong NCAA Division III Central Regional, as he led the Knights to a sixth place finish.

Coach John Kurtz had just two seniors on a team that appears to be on the verge of breaking into cross country's elite.

Despite losing her number one player to a shoulder injury, coach Gayle Stensland was able to produce a fourth place team finish and Wartburg's first IIAC singles champion in women's tennis.

The Knights were forced to revamp their line-up when Marti Koch of Waverly, who had been the number one singles runner-up the last three years, went down with a rotator cuff injury. Nevertheless, Heather Henschel of Beaver Dam, Wis., was able to place second in the number one singles at the conference tournament, and Sara Greenough of Waverly brought home all the gold at number two singles.

"Over achievers" and "playing to their full potential" were terms used by coach Don Canfield to describe his football team as it finished 6-4 in all games and tied for fourth place with a 4-4 record.

It was a big play year for the Knights as they got kick-off returns of 74 and 85 yards from Paul Secrist of Anamosa, Iowa, a 79-yard kick-off return from Brad Ott of Waverly, an 82-yard punt return from Brian Bowman of DeWitt, Iowa, and a 45-yard interception return from Kurt Boerm of Garwin, Iowa, all but one for a score. The 74-yard return by Secrist set up a touchdown against Buena Vista.

Ott, who broke a 26-year-old scoring record by his father, Marvin '60, last year, ended his career with 248 points and 2,899 rushing yards. He gained 832 on the ground this season and finished with 1,262 yards in total offense.

Ott earned first team All IIAC honors, as did Boerm. Second team honors went to middle linebacker Chad Hake of Radcliffe, Iowa, and offensive tackle Walt Vering of Janesville, Iowa.

Inexperience and the lack of a consistent fifth runner cost coach Liz Wuertz and her women's cross country team dearly this season. Only three experienced runners returned this fall, Teresa Cordes of Nevada, Iowa, Angie Pitz of Epworth, Iowa, and Lori Stumme of Waverly. A fourth runner, Shelly Parker of Rochester, Minn., emerged during the season, and that's the way they finished in the IIAC meet, Cordes, 15th, Pitz, 19th, Stumme, 24th, and Parker, 27th.

When Will Safris of Urbandale, Iowa, went down with a broken arm in the second match of the season, the Wartburg soccer team fell on hard times. Safris had been the Knights' leading scorer in each of the last three seasons. The Knights hung on to post a 2-2 record in their first four outings but then lost nine of their last 10 matches.

The Knights scored only 47 points, while giving up 110, and watched their goalies get bombarded with 259 shots on goal.

Weight room enhances fitness programs

By Darren Miller '88

With the opening this fall of the new weight training facility in the Physical Education Center, Wartburg fulfilled a major commitment to physical fitness for its students.

Weight training is an important component in any fitness program, and the room is used by all Wartburg students, faculty, staff and Knight Sports Club members from the community.

The facility is 80 feet by 34 feet, contains $15,000 worth of free weight and machine equipment, is lined with mirrors and has a Tuf-flex floor, one of the best on the market.

"We certainly see our facility as being as good if not better than anyone else's in the area," Dr. Richard Walker, wrestling coach and chair of the physical education department, said. "The new room meets our needs, which is an important criterion. We tried everything we could to make the room attractive, and the mirrors, stereo system and floor are nice things to have."

Five Wartburg students are employed by the college to check people into the room, answer questions, act as spotters during weight lifting and make sure everything in the room is running smoothly. Because of the accident liability involved with the new room, these students are a necessity.

"This room is something we have needed for a long time," Craig Green, a senior employee and lifter from Postville, Iowa, said. "From 3 to 6 p.m. we get the recreational lifters (people not out for athletics), and those out for sports usually lift from 7 to 9 p.m. I would say about 100 people use the weight room daily, including Sports Club members."

John Kurtt, who is athletic director and coaches baseball and cross country and teaches physical education, includes a three-week unit on weight training in his PE 100 course, a class required of all Wartburg students.

"We want to try to get a lot of people exposed to the weight room, so they will use it on their own," he said. "We want students to feel the room is theirs."

Kurtt stressed that weight training is not just for athletes but that everyone should lift weights.

"We show the students how to lift and incorporate strength into their fitness programs," Kurtt said. "In today's setting, people don't get enough strength work, which is important to a program."

Walker seconded the opinion that all students, not just athletes, should use the weight room.

"Our room is accessible to all college populations, and it should be a facility used by everybody," he said. "The weight room has a tendency to be a male-dominated place, but we also hope the females will use the room. It is open to everybody."

Amy Cummings, a senior from Menomonie, Wis., takes advantage of weight training, but she doesn't only focus on becoming stronger for physical fitness. Cummings is a competitive body builder and placed as high as second in a competition this year.

"I normally compete three times a year," she said. "I usually lift at Wartburg four times a week, and I try to work on my overall body symmetry, get a good proportion of muscle mass and try to get my muscles as defined as possible."

An obvious group that benefits from the weight room is the Wartburg athletes.

"We are quite concerned about our athletic teams having access to a first-class weight room," Walker said. "If you are going to develop an athlete to his or her full potential, it would be hard to avoid the weight room."

Jeff Voss, a junior wrestler from Clarksville, Iowa, compiled a 22-20 record last season and hopes to improve that mark this winter after an extensive weight training program.

"I lift to prepare myself for the wrestling season," he said. "Strength is beneficial in wrestling because it helps with muscle tone and endurance. In order to compete in today's athletics, you have to be in tip-top shape, and weight lifting is a part of that."

If not done correctly, weight training can have negative effects. If a person works solely on one set of muscles, the antagonist muscles won't develop. Becoming too engrossed in lifting also can cause a person to forget about other aspects necessary for a complete fitness program, such as running, according to Walker. A person must also work on flexibility while lifting weights; otherwise agility and quickness could be lost.

WEIGHT ROOM—Wartburg's new weight room in the Physical Education Center meets a variety of needs for Wartburg students. It is used by athletes to build strength and bulk, by other students for wellness programs and by those needing rehabilitation from certain types of injuries.

Nearly all of the Wartburg athletic programs use some form of weight training either in the off-season or during the competitive year. Janet Vaughan has volleyball and softball players lift in the off-season, and a new, in-season lifting routine has paid off for the netters this fall.

"This year we wanted to lift throughout the season, and so far we have won almost every 'push' across the net in our volleyball games," she said. "We are a much stronger team than many of our opponents, and weight training has been a factor in that."

Vaughan's program for volleyball utilizes five Universal weight stations, three Nautilus stations, a free weight station and sit-ups.

"In the off-season, we can only encourage a program, but most of the team do the workouts," she said. "We will use a more specific program for softball that will concentrate on the arms and shoulders."

Walker encourages a similar off-season lifting program for wrestlers for overall strength development, and during the season, he attempts to maintain the wrestlers' strength.

"It is kind of a contradiction when our wrestlers are cutting weight," Walker said. "We want them to lose weight but not lose muscle bulk. Wrestlers have a tendency to lose strength when they cut weight, so we want to lift to regain that strength."

Kurtt added that it is almost impossible to play baseball these days without stronger players, so he uses a plan to stretch and tone their muscles by a circuit known as the Nolan Ryan workout. Players lift five-to-ten-pound dumbbells in one or two sets of 10, isolating the muscles used most often in the sport. For cross country runners, Kurtt wants them to lift only the upper body muscles in the off-season. A stronger upper body gives the runner better arm carriage and the ability to close a race better.

COMPETITIVE BODY BUILDER—Amy Cummings, a senior from Menomonie, Wis., is a competitive body builder. She uses the Wartburg weight room on a daily basis and as a result has placed as high as second in competitive events.

Kathy Meyer Thomas promotes a program that is muscle-specific. Her women's basketball team attempts to build strength in the off-season, but it doesn't lift during the season because "we don't want to tear our bodies down," she explained. The women do routines that mimic the motion of a shot in basketball, such as lat pulls and wrist exercises to improve strength in the upper body.

Weight training can improve recovery time from injury. Senior Curtis Mack of Clermont, Iowa, is a pitcher on the baseball team, but his athletic future was jeopardized by a leg injury during the summer. Mack had a 100 percent tear of an interior ligament in his knee, and doctors are recommending numerous weight exercises in a rehabilitation program. All of the exercises Mack was instructed to do can be completed in the Wartburg weight room.

"The doctor recommended leg lifts, leg curls and then working into isotonic exercises," Mack said. "Wartburg has a new machine that will help me recover more quickly."

Whether it is an athlete trying to bulk up or maintain muscle tone, a student trying to gain strength or a person needing to rehabilitate after an injury, the Wartburg weight facility is a major asset.

Remember Garrison Keillor? DeLoyd Hochstetter won't forget!

Famed Garrison Keillor ended his popular "Prairie Home Companion" series on Minnesota Public Radio last summer; yet DeLoyd Hochstetter '55, the English teacher Keillor often praised, is still a celebrity. Newspapers across the country continue to ask Hochstetter to reminisce about Keillor's days in that Anoka, Minn., English class.

Hochstetter is a classic example of "quiet waters running deep." He gave Keillor confidence and sparked his creativity, and now the noted author and former radio personality claims him as mentor. (See "Gary Keillor's Favorite Teacher," Wartburg Magazine, Summer 1985.)

"It is a blessing to feel worthy when you're so young and shy," Keillor has said about Hochstetter's influence.

"Gary was so shy, he didn't say a word in class for two years," Hochstetter said. "The first time he read an essay in class he spoke so softly and quietly that it was hard to hear him. By the time he finished, he wove a story that had tears of laughter rolling down the faces of the class, and we were riveted to every word."

Later, as a college student, Keillor often 'played hookey' from the University of Minnesota and arrived at Hochstetter's doorstep with a bag of warm, buttered bagels and a sheaf of manuscripts for his mentor to read.

Hochstetter and his wife, Beverly (Blaisdell) '55, have been Keillor's platform guests at benefits he hosts, and now that DeLoyd and Beverly Blaisdell Hochstetter '55/'55 toured renovated Old Main and reminisced about his now-famous student, Garrison Keillor, founder of "Prairie Home Companion" on public radio.

Keillor has moved to his wife's native country, Denmark, the two families stay in touch by mail. Keillor writes that he misses the radio program.

"Here in the Faroes (Danish islands in the North Atlantic), life is continuously hard so I don't feel so bad," Keillor said. He was hiking the harsh rocky environment of the islands but eager to get back to his word processor in Copenhagen.

Hochstetter said Keillor's mother was always concerned about all the writing her son did. "He's going to be abnormal," she worried at a parent-teacher conference in 1958.

"That's all right, Mrs. Keillor," Hochstetter consoled, and he defended Gary's poor grades against teachers who pointed to his older brother's straight A's.

Today, Hochstetter's would-be English students miss gaining feelings of worth from him, because he is on leave of absence from teaching following surgery and treatment for a brain tumor.

78 Jim and Luann Koch Galvin, Phoenix, Ariz., announce the birth of Adam Michael July 15. He joins Taylor, 3½, and Kristine, 1½.

Dan '80 and Marti Womeldorf Guetzlaff, Eagan, Minn., announce the birth of Elliott James May 1. He joins Aaron Daniel, 3. Dan is a systems analyst for Unisys, and Marti is a sales representative for L.S. Heart, Inc.

Dr. Neil Mandsager, Thomasboro, Ill., is a captain in the U.S.A.F. at Chanute AFB, where he is an obstetrician and gynecologist. His wife, Kathryn Cooper '79, teaches pre- and postnatal classes and is an aerobics instructor. They are the parents of Meghan, 8; Grant, 5; and Kyle, 1.

Ulrich and Vicki Nelsen '80 Groth have moved to Algona, Iowa. He is publisher of the North Iowa newspaper. They are the parents of Jennifer, 4; Alex, 2½; and Christopher, 6 months.
